Notes on Contributors / Notices biographiques

MARIE-ANNE CASSELOT is a doctoral student in philosophy at Université Laval (Quebec). Her academic background includes a B.A. in philosophy at Université du Québec à Montréal and an M.A. in philosophy at McGill University (Montreal) with a focus on feminist philosophy. Her research areas are phenomenology, feminist materialisms, and environmental philosophy. Her doctoral project seeks to associate Merleau-Ponty’s phenomenology with the new field of ecophenomenology. Specifically, she works on embodiment in order to connect it with space and nature, and thus contribute to understandings of nature as a complex entity involving a shared materiality between humans, environmental others, and natural elements.

ROBIN Celikates is Associate Professor of Political and Social Philosophy at the University of Amsterdam, where he also directs the research project Transformations of Civil Disobedience. He is a member of the Amsterdam Centre for Globalisation Studies and an Associate Member of the Institute for Social Research in Frankfurt am Main. Most recently he has co-edited Transformations of Democracy: Crisis, Protest, and Legitimation and The Irregularization of Migration in Contemporary Europe: Detention, Deportation, Drowning (both Rowman & Littlefield 2015).
ALEXANDRE COUTURE-MINGHERAS est doctorant contractuel et chargé de cours à l’Université Paris 1 Panthéon-Sorbonne. Sa thèse porte sur la tradition du monisme neutre, d’Avenarius à Russell. Il a assuré la coordination éditoriale d’un dossier sur le neutre dans Implications philosophiques et publié un article dans Aestriaca en 2015 (« Crise du Moi et utopie de l’Autre : le solipsisme chez Ernst Mach »).

ANDREW DILTS is assistant professor of political theory in the Department of Political Science at Loyola Marymount University. He is the author of Punishment and Inclusion: Race, Membership, and the Limits of American Liberalism (Fordham, 2014), co-editor (with P. Zurn) of Active Intolerance: Michel Foucault, the Prisons Information Group, and the Future of Abolition (Palgrave, 2015), and co-editor (with N. Cisneros) of a two-part special project in Radical Philosophy Review entitled, “Political Theory and Philosophy in the Time of Mass Incarceration” (Issues 17.2 & 18.2).

CAMERON ROBERT DUNCAN is a doctoral student in the Department of Curriculum and Pedagogy at the University of British Columbia. His current work builds on Heidegger’s understanding of thinking to reimagine the contemporary university. He writes on continental philosophy, Marxism, and phenomenology.

JOSH MICHAEL HAYES is Assistant Professor of Philosophy at Alvernia University. His area of specialization is Aristotle and the history of Aristotelian commentary. He is the author of numerous articles focusing upon the influence of Aristotle in 20th-century phenomenology and co-editor of Aristotle and the Arabic Tradition (Cambridge University Press). He is a long-standing member of the Ancient Philosophy Society, the Society for Phenomenology and Existential Philosophy, the International Association of Environmental Philosophy, and the American Philosophical Association.

CHRISTINA M. HOLMES is an Assistant Professor of Women’s, Gender, and Sexuality Studies at DePauw University (Indiana, U.S.A). Her current research explores the intersections between ecofeminism, new material feminisms, and Chicana studies—a manuscript on this topic, Ecological Borderlands: Body, Nature, and Spirit in Chicana Feminism, is forthcoming with the University of Illinois Press (November 2016).

TODD MAY is Class of 1941 Memorial Professor of the Humanities at Clemson University. He is the author of fourteen books of philosophy, most recently A Significant Life: Human Meaning in a Silent Universe (2015) and A Fragile Life: Accepting our Vulnerability (forthcoming 2016), both at University of Chicago Press.
LADELLE MCWHORTER is the author of Bodies and Pleasures: Foucault and the Politics of Sexual Normalization (1999), Racism and Sexual Oppression in Anglo-America: A Genealogy (2009), both at Indiana University Press, and more than three dozen articles on Foucault, Bataille, Irigaray, and race theory. With Gail Stenstad, she edited Heidegger and the Earth: Essays in Environmental Philosophy (Toronto, 2009). She holds the Stephanie Bennett Smith Chair in Women, Gender, and Sexuality Studies and is also Professor of Environmental Studies and holds an appointment in the Philosophy Department at the University of Richmond in Richmond, Virginia.

SANDRO MEZZADRA teaches political theory at the University of Bologna and is adjunct fellow at the Institute for Culture and Society of the University of Western Sydney. He is currently visiting research fellow at the Humboldt University, Berlin (Berliner Institut für empirische Migrations- und Integrationsforschung). In the last decade his work has centered particularly on the relations between globalization, migration and citizenship as well as on postcolonial theory and criticism. He is an active participant in the “post-workerist” debates and one of the founders of the website Euronomade (www.euronomade.info). With Brett Neilson he is the author of Border as Method, or, the Multiplication of Labor (Duke University Press, 2013).

THOMAS NAIL is an Associate Professor of Philosophy at the University of Denver. He is the author of Returning to Revolution: Deleuze, Guattari and Zapatismo (Edinburgh University Press, 2012), The Figure of the Migrant (Stanford University Press, 2015), and Theory of the Border (Oxford University Press, forthcoming 2016). His work has appeared in Angelaki, Theory & Event, Philosophy Today, Parrhesia, Deleuze Studies, Foucault Studies, and elsewhere. His publications can be downloaded at http://du.academia.edu/thomasnail.

ADRIANA NOVOA completed her MA and PhD in Latin American History at the University of California, San Diego. She is a cultural historian whose specialty is science in Latin America, and with Alex Levine she has written two books about Darwinism in Argentina: From Man to Monkey (University of Chicago Press, 2010), and Darwinists! (Brill, 2012). Her articles have been published in Journal of Latin American Studies, Science in Context, The Latinoamericanist, and Revista Hispánica Moderna, among others. She is currently working on From Virile to Sterile, a book manuscript that explores the intersection between Darwin’s evolutionism and masculinity in Argentina.

MIRIAM TOLA teaches at Northeastern University. Her research interests include feminist and decolonial environmental humanities, political theory and science studies. Her work has appeared in Reviews in Cultural Theory, Hypatia, Teoria and Theory & Event, and is forthcoming in South Atlantic Quarterly. She is currently working on two projects: a book manuscript on the politics of the common in the Anthropocene, and a new research that critically engages transnational campaigns for the rights of nature.

DANIELLA TRIMBOLI recently completed a jointly-awarded PhD at the University of Melbourne and the University of British Columbia. Her dissertation analysed the intersection of everyday multiculturalism and digital storytelling from a cultural studies perspective. She has taught Australian Studies and Tourism at Flinders University and fulfilled various research roles, including one for the Ngarrinderji Regional Authority at the Yunggorendi First Nations Centre. She is currently working for the Research Unit in Public Cultures at the University of Melbourne, and is a researcher on the public art project Immigration Place. She is also an assistant editor of the Journal of Intercultural Studies.

MARK WILLIAM WESTMORELAND is a doctoral student and instructor of philosophy and ethics at Villanova University where he is writing a dissertation on racial profiling. He also teaches philosophy and religious studies at Penn State Brandywine. He works in political philosophy, philosophy of race, and philosophy of technology, and has published on Bergson, Derrida, and issues of race/racism. He is co-editor of Beyond Bergson: Race, Gender, and Colonialism (SUNY, forthcoming) and editor of a forthcoming special issue of The Journal of French and Francophone Philosophy commemorating the 75th anniversary of Henri Bergson’s death. His papers can be downloaded at https://villanova.academia.edu/MarkWWestmoreland.